I gather ideas for paintings wherever I am and where I travel to. Since I live in coastal North Carolina, that means I paint what I see in the sky, landscape, animals and birds. My goal is to try to perfect my skills – trying to make each new painting better than the last.

I love having a purpose, and to me, this making of art and seeing the look on someone's face when they look at my pictures and see something that intrigues them makes my journey joyful.

I have studied at the Ringling School of Art and Design and from many knowable and skillful instructors. One of my favorite workshops is the weeklong Susan K Black Foundation workshop in Dubois, WY with world famous artists as instructors.

I belong to the Waterway Artists Association, Associated Artists of Southport and the Oil Painters of America.
